State Black Powder Match at Ricochet Junction ?

Consideration of the North-East Washington Regulators hosting the 2026 State Black Powder Match is again on the agenda for the Board Meeting of August.

Details of requirements will be presented for discussion and member input is needed for determination if the pursuit of such an undertaking is suitable for the club.

Have you ever considered that without gunpowder we would not be Cowboy shooting? Gunpowder, also commonly known as black powder to distinguish it from modern smokeless powder, is the earliest known chemical explosive. It consists of a mixture of sulfur, charcoal (which is mostly carbon) and potassium nitrate (saltpeter). The sulfur and charcoal act as fuels, while the saltpeter is an oxidizer.

The first confirmed reference to what can be considered gunpowder in China occurred in the 9th century. The invention of gunpowder by Chinese alchemists was likely an accidental byproduct from experiments seeking to create the elixir of life. Because of their similar use, both the original black powder formulation and the smokeless propellant which replaced it are now commonly described as gunpowder.

The combustion products of smokeless powder are mainly gaseous, compared to around 55% of solid products for black powder. In addition, smokeless powder does not leave the thick heavy fouling of hygroscopic material associated with black powder that causes rusting of the barrel. Smokeless powder was invented by Paul Vieille in 1884, and the most common formulations of smokeless powder are based on nitrocellulose. Vieille named his smokeless powder Poudre B (short for Poudre Blanch, white powder, as distinguished from black powder). In 1887, Alfred Noble obtained an English patent for a smokeless gunpowder he called Ballistite, which was patented in the United States in 1891. Nobel is also known for his inventing Dynamite, but he had such misgivings about his invention's contribution to warfare that he went on to create the Nobel Peace Prize to atone for his actions.
